

Coffee Lectures

The 19th Series

Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, 13:00, HCI G2

Tuesday, 19.11.2019

Now at ETH Zurich:

SciFinder<sup>n</sup> (No. 44)

The interface of the new SciFinder<sup>n</sup> offers a multitude of novel features such as synthesis planner, search for similar reactions or analysis of large hitsets. A must for all chemists, biologists, and materials scientists.

Presenter: Dr. Leo Betschart

Mendeley: A software for managing citations and PDF files. A real-life example. (No. 8)

Mendeley is an alternative to the well-known EndNote citation management system. We will give a brief demo how you can use Mendeley to be more efficient.

Presenter: Dr. Leo Betschart

Thursday, 21.11.2019

ACD /Name – a nomenclature tool (No. 32)

Draw a chemical structure, push the button, and get the correct IUPAC name! We show you how to do it.

Presenter: Dr. Jozica Dolenc

Tuesday, 26.11.2019

WebCSD – the online portal to the Cambridge Structural Database (No. 22)

The Cambridge Structural Database is the world's repository for over a million of small organic molecules and metal-organic crystal structures. Learn what options this portal offers for searching and finding.

Presenter: Dr. Jozica Dolenc

Wednesday, 27.11.2019

No Coffee Lecture!

But we are hosting the next Critical Thinking Seminar: Prof. em. Gerd Folkers and philosopher Reto Givel discuss Big Data, Multiperspektivität, Fake Think: Wissenschaft in der Vertrauenskrise

Free Brownbag Lunch offered, HCI G2, 12:15–13:30

Thursday, 28.11.2019

Mercury (No. 31)

Mercury is a versatile 3D viewer for small molecules. It is suitable for structural analysis and for creation of publication quality images. We show you how to display crystal packing, to make measurements, and to generate stunning graphics.

Presenter: Dr. Joachim Schnabl

Tuesday, 3.12.2019

SoS, not SOS (No. 23)

Learn about Science of Synthesis (SoS), the only chemistry information that, besides linking to papers, provides full-text information on the synthetic methods – with didactic reviews by experts.

Presenter: Dr. Leo Betschart

Wednesday, 4.12.2019

Drug discovery in literature with Embase (No. 67)

Are you looking for information on drugs, pharmacovigilance and other biomedical topics without success in PubMed? Then try the database Embase, which provides you with additional resources accessible via a specialized search function.

Presenter: Dr. Dennis Özcelik

Thursday, 5.12.2019

ISSUU – getting publications online easily (No. 51)

ISSUU makes you a publisher within minutes. A few clicks – and your publication is online among 50 million other publications. The basic version is free and includes usage stats.

Presenter: Dr. Oliver Renn
